Lecture on 'Shaheed Bhagat Singh: Ek Samvad' at Sevadal Mahila Mahavidyalaya, Nagpur

In the today's world when the youth seems to be confused and freaking into lunatic mayhem, the answer could be sought from the life study of the greatest revolutionary of India, the great freedom fighter Bhagat Singh. His life sketch itself is an inspiration to youths in many ways.

Bhagat Singh was revolutionary since his childhood. At the very young age, he got inspired by Mahatma Gandhi's Non-Cooperation Movement. Responding to the call given by Mahatma Gandhi, he burned the British goods in the national cause and also left government school to enroll at the National College in Lahore. Jallianwala Bagh Massacre in 1919 and killing of unarmed Akali protesters at the Nankana Sahib in 1921 had great impact on his thought process. When the Chauri Chaura Incident took place and Gandhiji called off the Non-Cooperation movement, Bhagat Singh was disillusioned. Unhappy with the decision, Bhagat Singh, asserted to revolutionary methods. Though his family members were staunch supporter of non-violent approach to attain Swaraj by Mahatma Gandhi, he rejected the very ideology. In this way he started advocating violent insurgency and encouraging youths to join his revolutionary movement. He is also called as "Shaheed Bhagat Singh" which was attained after sacrifice of his life for the nation.

To understand life of legendary Bhagat Singh, it is very important to appreciate the deliberation of making his stature in reality. To make Bhagat Singh's philosophy more relevant in the current time, Prof. Chaman Lal from Jawaharlal Nehru University who is the Sahitya Akademi Award winner in 2002, has been invited for a lecture on 'Shaheed Bhagat Singh: Ek Samvad' by Maharashtra Andhashradha Nirmoolan Samiti (MANS), Purogami Samvichari Sanghata in association with Sevadal Mahila Mahavidyalaya, NSS Unit, Nagpur. Shri Avinash Patil, President, Maharashtra Andhashradha Nirmoolan Samiti, will preside over and Shri Sanjayji Shende, President, Sevadal Education Society, will be guest of honour. The lecture would be held on 30th September 2019 at Sevadal Auditorium at 11.00 am.
